UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT
NORTHERN DISTRICT OF CALIFORNIAMELITA MEYER, ET AL.,

Plaintiffs,

v.

BEBE STORES, INC.,

Defendant.

Case No. 14-cv-00267-YGR

ORDER DENYING BEBE'S MOTION TO STRIKE OR FOR MORE DEFINITE STATEMENT; DENYING MOTION TO DECERTIFY

Re: Dkt. No. 115, 116, 117

Plaintiffs bring this class action against defendant bebe Stores, Inc. ("bebe") alleging two counts: (i) negligent violations of the Telephone Consumer Protection Act ("TCPA"); and (ii) willful violations of the TCPA. (Dkt. No. 112, "FAC".) To prevail under the TCPA, plaintiffs must establish that a defendant: (i) "made" text message calls (ii) using an automatic telephone dialing system ("ATDS")<sup>1</sup> (iii) without prior express consent. 47 U.S.C. § 227(b)(1). Beginning on October 16, 2013, regulations became effective requiring prior express written consent before "deliver[ing] or caus[ing] to be delivered to the person called advertisements or telemarketing messages using an [ATDS]." 47 C.F.R. §§ 64.1200(a)(2), (f)(8). The Court previously certified two classes in this action:

1. Post-October 16, 2013 Non-Club bebe Class

All persons within the United States who provided their mobile telephone number to bebe in one of bebe's stores at the point-of-sale and were sent an SMS or text message from bebe during the period of time beginning October 16, 2013 and continuing until the date the Class is certified, who were not members of Club bebe during the Class Period.

<sup>1</sup> The term ATDS is defined as "equipment which has the capacity . . . to store or produce telephone numbers to be called, using a random or sequential number generator[, and] to dial such numbers." 47 U.S.C. § 227(a)(1).

2. Post-October 16, 2013 Club bebe Class

All persons within the United States who provided their mobile telephone number to bebe in one of bebe's stores at the point-of-sale and were sent an SMS or text message from bebe during the period of time beginning October 16, 2013 and continuing until the date the Class is certified, who were members of Club bebe during the Class Period.

With regards to the Club bebe Class, the Court instructed plaintiffs to present an amended complaint joining a proper class representative, else the Court would decertify the same. On October 21, 2016, plaintiffs filed an amended complaint naming plaintiff Courtney Barrett as a representative for the Club bebe Class. (See FAC.)

Now before the Court are two motions from bebe:<sup>2</sup> (i) motion to decertify both classes; and (ii) motion to strike, or in the alternative for a more definite statement, allegations relating to plaintiff Courtney Barrett. (Dkt. Nos. 115, 116.) With regards to the motion to decertify, bebe argues that the Court should decertify both classes because further discovery has revealed (i) that neither class is ascertainable and (ii) plaintiffs lack common proof as to whether the equipment used was an ATDS. Bebe further argues that the Court should decertify the Club bebe Class on the grounds that plaintiff Barrett is an improper representative. On January 6, 2017, the Court requested supplemental briefing on the effect of the Ninth Circuit's recent decision in Briseno v. ConAgra Foods, Inc., 844 F.3d 1121 (9th Cir. 2017) on the topic of ascertainability. The parties filed supplemental briefs on January 20 and 27, 2017. (Dkt. Nos. 136, 137.)

Having carefully considered the pleadings, the papers submitted on these motions, and oral arguments held on February 7, 2017, the Court DENIES bebe's motions.<sup>3</sup>

<sup>2</sup> Defendant bebe also filed a motion regarding its objections to plaintiffs' trial plan. While the Court acknowledges such objections and will consider the same if and when the time comes to prepare for trial, such is not a proper motion and does not at this time require action from the Court. Accordingly, the Court administratively terminates Docket Number 117.

<sup>3</sup> Plaintiffs and bebe each filed two administrative sealing motions (Dkt. Nos. 123, 124, 132, 134). The material in question is subject to an earlier Stipulated Protective Order, allowing the parties to designate certain documents produced in discovery as confidential. (Dkt. No. 53.) The Court finds the requests are sufficiently justified under the applicable "good cause" standard and, therefore, GRANTS the motions to seal the designated excerpts and documents in question solely for purposes of resolving the instant motions. See Kamakana v. City & Cty. of Honolulu, 447 F.3d 1172, 1179–80 (9th Cir. 2006). The Court notes that should the parties file motions to seal such documents in the context of a summary judgment motion, it may not grant the same, as those are dispositive motions.

1           I. BACKGROUND

2           The Court adopts the Background section in its August 22, 2016 Order regarding class 3 certification, and adds the following facts relevant to the instant motions:

4           Pursuant to the Court’s order, plaintiffs filed their FAC joining plaintiff Barrett as a 5 representative for the Club bebe Class. (FAC ¶¶ 37–45.) With regards to Barrett, records show 6 that she signed up for Club bebe in October 2010, and provided a telephone number during the 7 sign-up process. (See FAC, ¶ 38; Dkt. No. 124-7 at 2.) However, Barrett returned to a bebe store 8 on December 12, 2013, and in connection with a purchase, provided her mobile telephone number 9 at a point-of-sale (“POS”). (Dkt. No. 116-2 at ¶ 2(k).)<sup>4</sup> Shortly thereafter, plaintiffs allege that 10 bebe sent Barrett the Opt-In Text at issue in this litigation. (FAC ¶ 37.)

11           II. MOTION TO DECERTIFY

12           A. Legal Framework

13           Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 23(c)(1)(C) provides that “[a]n order that grants or denies 14 class certification may be altered or amended before final judgment.” “[A] district court retains 15 the flexibility to address problems with a certified class as they arise, including the ability to 16 decertify.” U. Steel, Paper & Forestry v. ConocoPhillips Co., 593 F.3d 802, 809 (9th Cir. 2010); 17 see also Gen. Tel. Co. of Sw. v. Falcon, 457 U.S. 147, 160 (1982) (“Even after a certification order 18 is entered, the judge remains free to modify it in light of subsequent developments in the 19 litigation.”). “The standard applied by the courts in reviewing a motion to decertify is the same as 20 the standard used in evaluating a motion to certify; namely, whether the requirements of Rule 23 21 are met.” Cruz v. Dollar Tree Stores, Inc., 270 F.R.D. 499, 502 (N.D. Cal. Sept. 9, 2010) (citing 22 O’Connor v. Boeing N. Am., Inc., 197 F.R.D. 404, 410 (C.D. Cal. 2000)).

24           <sup>4</sup> At oral arguments, plaintiffs’ counsel confirmed that the number provided in October 25 2010 was the same number as that provided in December 2013. However, plaintiffs indicate, and 26 bebe did not dispute, that it was not entered into bebe’s database as a mobile telephone number in 27 2010, and was only entered as such when plaintiff Barrett returned to the store and confirmed it as 28 a mobile telephone number at a POS in December 2013. (See Dkt. No. 123-7 at 2, Mendelsohn Decl. ¶ 2 (section of database showing the “Create Date” for Barrett’s mobile telephone number entry as “12/12/2013”); Dkt. No. 123-8, Mendelsohn Decl. Ex. 1, Agarwal Dep. Tr. 38:4–39:12 (confirming that the “Create Date” field is “the date that the individual provided their cell phone number”)).

1           B.    Discussion

2           1. Motion to Decertify Both Classes

3           a. Ascertainability

4           In this Court's previous order certifying the two classes at issue here, the Court found that 5           plaintiffs' showing of ascertainability was sufficient upon plaintiffs' representation that they 6           anticipated being able to obtain records from mGage, whom plaintiffs indicated was currently in 7           possession of Air2Web records that could establish class membership. Most recently, bebe 8           contends, plaintiffs conceded that they have been unable to get the requisite documents from 9           mGage and mGage has indicated they may not actually have the ability to produce the same.
 10           (Dkt. No. 117-3 at 2.) On such basis, bebe argues that the Court should decertify both classes.

11           Shortly after bebe filed its motion to decertify, the Ninth Circuit issued a decision in 12           Briseno holding that class proponents are not required to demonstrate that there is an 13           administratively feasible way to determine who is in the class in order for the class to be certified.
 14           Briseno, 844 F.3d at 1126. In so holding, the Ninth Circuit explained that Rule 23's "enumerated 15           criteria already address the policy concerns that have motivated some courts to adopt a separate 16           administrative feasibility requirement, and do so without undermining the balance of interests 17           struck by the Supreme Court, Congress, and the other contributors to the Rule." Id. at 1123. The 18           Court asked the parties to file additional briefs discussing the impact of the Ninth Circuit's 19           decision on bebe's motion to decertify.

20           Despite this recent opinion, bebe continues to argue that the Court should decertify the 21           class due to plaintiffs' inability to obtain such records from mGage. Bebe contends that, although 22           the Ninth Circuit has disavowed the existence of an independent administrative feasibility
 23           requirement, Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 23(b)(3)(2) still requires a showing that a class 24           action would be superior to other available methods. Such a requirement, argues bebe, includes an 25           analysis of the "manageability" of the class and requires "courts to balance the benefits of class 26           adjudication against its costs." See id. at 1128. In support of its argument, bebe primarily relies 27           on Smith v. Microsoft Corp., 297 F.R.D. 464 (S.D. Cal. 2014), which preceded Briseno. In Smith, 28           the court refused to certify a TCPA class finding that plaintiff failed to satisfy the superiority

1 requirement. Specifically, the Smith court conducted an analysis balancing several factors, and 2 concluded that a class action would not be superior, in part because no feasible method existed to 3 determine who actually received a text message. Id. at 472–73. Similar to the situation at hand, 4 the defendant in Smith had produced a list of mobile telephone numbers that were sent text 5 messages. However, the court credited declarations from defendants indicating that at least some 6 of those phone numbers were incapable of receiving texts, and thus, even though the court could 7 determine what numbers were sent texts, one could not actual receipt. Id. at 473. Additionally, the 8 court found that asking potential class members to opt-in if they remembered receiving a text 9 would be ineffective, “because it is highly unlikely that, more than five years out, an individual 10 would remember that single unsolicited text message.” Id.

11 Such management concerns are alone insufficient to decertify the classes here. The Ninth 12 Circuit specifically noted that it was not clear why “requiring an administratively feasible way to 13 identify all class members at the certification stage is necessary to protect [defendant’s] due 14 process rights.” Briseno, 844 F.3d at 1132. The Ninth Circuit also addressed several of the same 15 concerns bebe has raised: “If the concern is that claimants in cases like this will eventually offer 16 only a ‘self-serving affidavit’ as proof of class membership, it is again unclear why that issue must 17 be resolved at the class certification stage to protect a defendant’s due process rights.” Id. The 18 Ninth Circuit further explained that defendants can “challenge the claims of absent class members 19 if and when they file claims for damages” explaining that parties have “long relied on ‘claim 20 administrators, various auditing processes, sampling for fraud detection, follow-up notices to 21 explain the claims process, and other techniques tailored by the parties and the court’ to validate 22 claims.” Id. at 1131 (citation omitted).

23 Plaintiffs’ inability to obtain the actual messaging records from mGage does, however, 24 impact the superiority analysis under Rule 23(b)(3), which was a necessary component of the 25 Court’s certification of both classes. Under such analysis, courts consider the following four non-26 exhaustive factors: (1) the interests of members of the class in individually controlling the 27 prosecution or defense of separate actions; (2) the extent and nature of any litigation concerning 28 the controversy already commenced by or against the members of the class; (3) the desirability of

1 concentrating the litigation of the claims in the particular forum; and (4) the difficulties likely to 2 be encountered in the management of a class action. Fed. R. Civ. P. 23(b)(3)(A)–(D).

3 Contrary to the finding in Smith, this Court previously found that the statutory damages 4 provided by the TCPA are “not sufficient to compensate the average consumer for the time and 5 effort that would be involved in bringing small claims against a national corporation.” (Dkt. No.
6 106 at 18 (quoting Agne v. Papa John’s Int’l, Inc., 286 F.R.D. 559, 571–72 (W.D. Wa. 2012) 7 (citing cases)); see also Whitaker v. Bennett Law, PLLC, No. 13-CV-3145, 2014 WL 5454398, at 8 *7 (S.D. Cal. Oct. 7, 2014) (finding that given the damages allowed under the TCPA, “requiring 9 the putative class members to adjudicate their claims independently would be too economically 10 burdensome and would deprive many of a chance to recover under the law”). The Court does not 11 now disturb its finding on that factor. The Court next evaluates whether the benefits of litigating 12 this action as a class outweigh the manageability concerns present here.<sup>5</sup>

13 Here, plaintiffs have presented the Declaration of Randall A. Snyder, an independent 14 telecommunications technology consultant, who avers that the list of telephone numbers that bebe 15 produced in discovery can be readily analyzed “to determine which of these numbers would have 16 been sent a text message.” (Dkt. No. 126 at ¶ 89.) Mr. Snyder further states that “[t]his analysis 17 will produce a final list of cellular telephone numbers that would have been sent a text message by 18 Air2Web on behalf of [bebe].” (Id.) Bebe argues that such method would not conclusively 19 determine who received text messages, which would be the only people to whom bebe would be 20 liable, if at all. Thus, bebe contends, it would be impossible to determine bebe’s actual liability in 21 this action because it hinges on how many people actually received text messages during the Class
22 Period. Although the Court agrees that such issues do present manageability concerns, the Court 23 finds that at this stage, plaintiffs’ showing is sufficient to tilt the balance in their favor. In a case 24 involving the statutory damages at issue here, it is unlikely that individual plaintiffs would actually 25 incur the time and expense to bring these claims. Thus, but for a class action, such violations of

26
27

<sup>5</sup> Bebe did not raise arguments with regards to factors two and three of the superiority 28 analysis, and thus, the Court need not address the same.

1 the TCPA may never be brought to light. See Briseno, 844 F.3d at 1128 (discussing need for 2 balancing administrative feasibility against other superiority factors particularly where “there may 3 be no realistic alternative to class treatment”). The Court therefore finds that a class action is the 4 superior method for litigating the issues in this case, and therefore, plaintiffs have satisfied the 5 requirements under Rule 23(b)(3).

6 Accordingly, the Court DENIES bebe’s motion to decertify both classes on these grounds.

7 b. Common Proof Regarding Use of ATDS

8 Bebe also argues that both classes should be decertified because plaintiffs have presented 9 no common proof establishing that bebe utilized an ATDS to send text messages during the Class 10 Period. Plaintiffs counter proffering the declaration of Mr. Snyder, who provides the following 11 opinions with regards to the evidence on the record relating to bebe’s use of an ATDS: Mr.
12 Snyder, who has set forth significant experience in the industry, has opined that the text messages 13 sent to plaintiffs contained a short code number, “42323.” (Dkt. No. 126 at ¶ 59.) According to 14 Mr. Snyder, text messages containing such short codes can only be “sent by computer equipment; 15 otherwise, the originating address of the mobile-terminated text messages would appear as a 16 standard 10-digit cellular telephone number.” (Id.) Mr. Snyder further opines that the “creation of 17 the SMS communications protocol format and the transmission of the SMS messages that were 18 sent en masse occurred in a completely automatic fashion.” (Id. at ¶ 60.) Based on this 19 information and Mr. Snyder’s knowledge of Air2Web, he opines that bebe utilized an ATDS to 20 transmit these messages. (See id. at ¶¶ 57–58.)

21 Such a showing at this stage is sufficient to demonstrate that plaintiffs intend to offer proof 22 common to the entire class that bebe utilized an ATDS during the three-month class period.
23 Bebe’s contention that such evidence is not probative of bebe’s violation of the TCPA does not 24 persuade. If bebe believes that the evidence is insufficient to establish liability under the TCPA, 25 other procedural mechanisms are available. Such arguments, however, do not militate towards 26 decertification. Bebe cannot short-circuit the process by asking the Court to make a factual 27 determination regarding the probative value of plaintiffs’ expert’s opinions on this record, 28

1 particularly where bebe has not even deposed such expert. Accordingly, the Court DENIES bebe's 2 motion to decertify both classes on this ground.

3 2. Motion to Decertify Club bebe Class

4 Finally, bebe also moves to decertify the Club bebe Class on the grounds that plaintiff
5 Barrett is not an appropriate class representative. Specifically, bebe argues that a proper Club 6 bebe Class representative would be an individual who both gave their number to bebe and 7 received a text message from bebe during the Class Period itself. Bebe notes that Barrett provided 8 her mobile telephone number to bebe in October 2010 when she first enrolled in Club bebe, not 9 during the Class Period. (Dkt. No. 116-2 at 2.) On this basis, bebe contends that Barrett would 10 not have fallen under the written consent rule promulgated in October 2013, and, therefore, is not 11 similarly situated. Plaintiffs respond with two arguments: first, the class definition is not limited 12 to those who provided a mobile telephone number during the Class Period; and second, even if it 13 were, plaintiff Barrett actually provided such number both before and during the Class Period. As 14 to the second argument, plaintiffs note that, although Barrett provided a telephone phone number 15 to bebe in 2010 as part of her Club bebe membership, it was not until December 12, 2013 that 16 bebe asked Barrett for a mobile telephone number at a POS for the purposes of the text messaging 17 program at issue in this litigation, which, as discussed above, bebe's records confirm.

18 With regards to plaintiffs' first argument, the Court clarifies that the class definition must 19 necessarily apply only to those who both provided a mobile telephone number and then received a 20 text message during the Class Period. The timing of when a class member provided such number 21 to bebe is relevant to whether they belong to the Class. The Court refused to certify the larger 22 class proposed by plaintiff and only certified the two post-October 2013 classes due to a 23 regulatory change that required consent to be written. For everyone else, the Court found that the 24 "varied scripts and instructions provided to different stores at different times . . . renders the 25 question of consent not one that can be answered on a classwide basis because it would require an 26 individual assessment of what each customer was told." (Dkt. No. 106 at 10.) If plaintiff Barrett 27 had provided her mobile telephone number prior to the Class Period, these very same 28 individualized issues of consent would predominate.

1       With regards to plaintiffs' second argument, however, the Court finds that the relevant date
 2 for when plaintiff provided her mobile telephone number to bebe is December 12, 2013, not 3 October 2010. Bebe concedes as much in their motion to decertify: "At that time [i.e. October 4 2010], bebe point-of-sale software did not include a mobile telephone number field; the mobile 5 telephone number field was later added to facilitate customers initiating their enrollment in bebe's 6 text messaging program." (Dkt. No. 116-1 at 7.) Thus, the relevant interaction here occurred on 7 December 12, 2013, when bebe specifically asked plaintiff Barrett for a mobile telephone number, 8 and then shortly thereafter sent her a text message. Bebe's argument essentially boils down to 9 asking the Court to decide on the merits of their defense: that plaintiff Barrett's enrollment in 10 Club bebe and provision of a mobile telephone number at the time of enrollment constituted 11 consent to receive the text message at issue in this litigation. Whether that is so, however, is not 12 an appropriate argument for class certification purposes, and is better reserved for summary 13 judgment or trial.<sup>6</sup>

14 III. MOTION TO STRIKE OR FOR MORE DEFINITE STATEMENT

15 A. Legal Framework

16       A court "may strike from a pleading an insufficient defense or any redundant, immaterial, 17 impertinent, or scandalous matter." Fed. R. Civ. P. 12(f). "The function of a [Rule] 12(f) motion 18 to strike is to avoid the expenditure of time and money that must arise from litigating spurious 19 issues by dispensing with those issues prior to trial . . ." Whittlestone, Inc. v. Handi-Craft Co., 20 618 F.3d 970, 973 (9th Cir. 2010) (quoting Fantasy, Inc. v. Fogerty, 984 F.2d 1524, 1527 (9th Cir.
 21 1993), rev'd on other grounds, 510 U.S. 517 (1994)). "Motions to strike 'are generally disfavored
 22 because they are often used as delaying tactics and because of the limited importance of pleadings 23 in federal practice.'" Shaterian v. Wells Fargo Bank, N.A., 829 F. Supp. 2d 873, 879 (N.D. Cal.
 24 2011) (quoting Rosales v. Citibank, Fed. Sav. Bank, 133 F. Supp. 2d 1177, 1180 (N.D. Cal.
 25 2001)).

26
 27       <sup>6</sup> Should the parties bring motions for summary judgment on this issue, the parties should 28 address the Ninth Circuit's recent opinion addressing issues of consent in the context of the TCPA in Van Patten v. Vertical Fitness Group, -- F.3d --, 2017 WL 460663 (9th Cir. 2017).

1        Given the disfavored status of Rule 12(f) motions, “courts often require a showing of 2        prejudice by the moving party before granting the requested relief.” Sanchez v. City of Fresno, 3        914 F. Supp. 2d 1079, 1122 (E.D. Cal. 2012) (quoting California Dep’t of Toxic Substances
 4        Control v. Alco Pac., Inc., 217 F. Supp. 2d 1028, 1033 (C.D. Cal. 2002)). “If there is any doubt 5        whether the portion to be stricken might bear on an issue in the litigation, the court should deny 6        the motion.” Holmes v. Elec. Document Processing, Inc., 966 F. Supp. 2d 925, 930 (N.D. Cal.
 7        2013) (quoting Platte Anchor Bolt, Inc. v. IHI, Inc., 352 F. Supp. 2d 1048, 1057 (N.D. Cal. 2004)).
 8        Whether to grant a motion to strike is a matter committed to the sound discretion of the district
 9        court. See Whittlestone, 618 F.3d at 973 (citing Nurse v. United States, 226 F.3d 996, 1000 (9th 10        Cir. 2000)).

11        Rule 12(e) allows a party to move for a more definite statement before filing a responsive 12        pleading where the original pleading “is so vague or ambiguous that a party cannot reasonably 13        prepare a response.” Fed. R. Civ. P. 12(e). “Rule 12(e) motions are disfavored and rarely 14        granted.” Castaneda v. Burger King Corp., 597 F. Supp. 2d 1035, 1045 (N.D. Cal. 2009) (citing 15        Cellars v. Pac. Coast Packaging, Inc., 189 F.R.D. 575, 578 (N.D. Cal. 1999)). “The rule is aimed 16        at unintelligibility rather than lack of detail and is only appropriate when the defendants cannot 17        understand the substance of the claim asserted.” Id. (citing Beery v. Hitachi Home Elecs., Inc., 18        157 F.R.D. 477, 480 (C.D. Cal. 1993)). “If the detail sought by a motion for more definite 19        statement is obtainable through discovery, the motion should be denied.” Griffin v. Cedar Fair, L.P., 20        817 F. Supp. 2d 1152, 1156 (N.D. Cal. 2011) (quoting Castaneda, 597 F. Supp. 2d at 1045).

21        B. Discussion

22        Bebe moves to strike, or in the alternative for a more definite statement, allegations 23        relating to plaintiff Barrett because, as bebe contends, Barrett is not a proper representative of the 24        Club bebe Class. In short, bebe’s use of this procedural rule is wholly inappropriate in this 25        context.

26        With regards to bebe’s motion to strike references to Barrett and the Club bebe Class, 27        because the Court has denied bebe’s motion to decertify the Club bebe Class and has found that 28        Barrett is a proper representative of the same, the Court DENIES bebe’s motion to strike.

1       With regards to bebe's motion for a more definite statement, bebe argues that plaintiffs 2 should provide information as to when Barrett provided her phone number to bebe. Such detail, 3 however, as revealed by the briefing on the instant motions, is obtainable, and, in fact, has been 4 obtained, through discovery. Therefore, a motion for a more definite statement on this issue is 5 unnecessary. See Griffin, 817 F. Supp. 2d at 1156. Accordingly, the Court also DENIES bebe's 6 motion for a more definite statement.

7 IV. CONCLUSION

8       For the foregoing reasons, the Court DENIES bebe's motion to decertify the Club bebe and 9 Non-Club bebe Classes and bebe's motion to strike or for a more definite statement. The Court 10 GRANTS the parties' administrative motions to file certain exhibits and portions of their briefs 11 under seal, only for the purposes of the instant motions.

12       This Order terminates Docket Numbers 115, 116, 117, 123, 124, 132, and 134.
